Poetry.
THE SOLDIER'S TEAR.
Upon the hill he turned To take the last fond look Of the valley and the village church, And the cottage by the brook.
He listened to the sounds, So familiar to his ear;
And the soldier leant upon his sword And brushed away a tear.
Beside the cottage porch
He sat on his knees;
She flung a snowy scarf, Which fluttered in the breeze.
She breathed a prayer for him—A prayer he could not hear—But he paused to bless her, as she knelt, And wiped away a tear.
He turned and left the spot;
Oh, do not deem him weak,
For dauntless was the soldier's heart, Though tears were on his cheek.
Go, watch the foremost rank In danger's dark career—Be sure the hand-mot during there Has wiped away a tear.
Literature.
A Bit of Border Life.
BY AN OLD COMRADE OF DANIEL BOONE.
In the year 1807, I was living in a log-cabin settlement in Missouri. There were but a few of us, but we were strong-armed and stout-hearted—as we had need to be; for the prowling savages hemmed us in on every side. One day, in the Spring, I had to go to a neighboring settlement, where I was to be married, for some corn seed, and did not get back till the next morning.
I found no wife—no child—no neighbors on my return; only smoldering logs and mutilated corpses. The savages had made clean work of it, the night before. I was horror-stricken; but a gleam of comfort came to my heart when I missed the bodies of my wife and child. They had evidently been carried off as prisoners, and being alive they might be rescued. I hastened to the nearest settlement. It was John O'Neil's settlement. On arriving there, I found John in the same state as myself, excepting that his family had been slain along with his neighbors—he himself having escaped by being absent as I was—He of course did not hesitate a moment to join me in the attempt to rescue my wife and child.
We had ascertained that the attack upon my settlement had been made in the night by a party of less than a dozen Savages, whose village was near the mouth of the Des Moines River, scarcely two days' journey by land up the Mississippi. They had descended in canoes, and I knew that I had lost nearly two days, we might reach the Des Moines by land before they could arrive by the tortuous river, and against the powerful current.
Providing ourselves with two rifles each and a supply of ammunition, we started forth; and, being well mounted, rode rapidly in a north-easterly direction, to strike the Mississippi at about the point where we expected to intercept the canoes.
Here leaving our horses, we examined every part of the river bank for miles, hoping to find the camping-place of the Indians if they had yet passed; for we knew they would spend the night on shore.
We discovered nothing to indicate that they had passed, though it was more than possible that they might have made their camp on the further side, or upon some of the many islands in the river. At length, on reaching the mouth of a small stream, we discovered incoherent tracks in the mud, and the marks where two canoes had been dragged ashore; and, but a little distance from these signs, were the still smoldering embers of a camp-fire.
This was a joyful discovery. But how much scattered was my delight when I found scattered near the spot several familiar objects, which seemed purposely to have been left there as if to direct and encourage our pursuits. There were a child's shoe, a little apron, and a portion of a woman's dress, which I instantly recognized as having belonged to my little boy and wife. Besides, there were other articles of female apparel which I did not recognize, and I was convinced that the savages who were accompanying by a number of captives, could not be many hours ahead of us.
Thinking Heaven for these encouraging tokens, and praying that our hands might be strengthened for the coming struggle in which we hoped soon to be engaged, we pushed rapidly on, every now and then, where a long range of the river presented an opportunity, looking cautiously from the thickets for a sight of canoes.
In this manner we travelled nearly all day, when towards evening on coming to a sudden bend of the bank, we discovered almost beneath us the anxiously looked for objects.
There were two large dug-outs, each containing four painted savages, and as many female captives. In the foremost I perceived the dear objects of my agonizing solitude. My wife was seated upon the bottom of the canoe, and holding our darling boy to her bosom.
Thanks to the All-Merciful Father, they were yet unhurt, for I could see that the child slept sweetly, with its foot pressed protectively against its mother's breast. For an instant I had no eyes for anything else. I saw not her companions.
I scarcely saw their merciless captors.
The Indians were exerting themselves to their utmost strength to stem the current that swept swiftly upon the bend—or I am certain they might have captured me, as, in the excitement of my sudden joy, I exposed myself upon the edge of the bank. My wife saw me. But with the tact and presence of mind which brave women like her always display in trying moments, she placed "a finger upon her lips," and slightly motioned me to leave the spot, lifting her eyes upward, as if to thank Heaven that sure, succor was at hand.
As rapidly returning the recognition, I dropped back to the cover of the thicket, and falling upon my knees, I poured forth my heart in gratitude to that kind Being, who had been watching over these beloved ones, and prayed for this assistance in rescuing them from the fate those murderous fiends were reserving them for.
To attack the savages now was out of the question, and after a hurried consultation with O'Neil, we determined to keep cautiously along the bank of the river till evening. As we knew they would land on the west side of the river, and prepared their camp. The prisoners were landed, and tied to saplings in a circle, around which, after partaking of their scanty supper, the Indians disposed themselves.
Two spots they had selected showed that they thought not of pursuit. It was a kind of sink hole, where they were completely protected from the wind, and being without blankets, as well as their clothes, this was the more necessary, as the nights at this season were yet chilly.
Nonetheless, and scarcely daring to breathe, O'Neil and I crept to a position where we could look directly down upon the party without ourselves being seen, even had watchful sentinels been pacing about the Indian encampment. The savages had toiled hard all day against the powerful current of the Mississippi, and were all soon buried in sleep. Their loud snoring soon satisfied us of this.
Up to this time we had formed no final plan of rescuing the prisoners, and I whispered to O'Neil to give me his views.
"You see," said I, "we cannot use our rifles upon those varmints without endangering the lives of our friends, and besides, if every bullet of our four rifles counted, there would still remain two to use to fight."
"Just so, Sam," said he; "I don't use to rely on our shooting irons, (unless we club them.) At all events, in the commencement of the tussle. Our knives, you know, make no noise, and I reckon if we're cute about it, we can be good for some on 'em before the others wake.
But do you think they're all good asleep?"
"I've no doubt of it," said I. "Now, John, let us act upon your plan. Let us creep upon the murdering hounds and dispatch as many as possible while they sleep. But take our rifles as near to the spot as you can, and then I'll help you."
I led the way into the hollow, keeping a large cottonwood between me and the Indians, till we reached it. Then we leaned our four guns against its roots to be in readiness for use, then grasping our hunting knives in our right hands, we moved slowly, and without stirring a twig or leaf, down upon the circle of dark forms.
The early moon had risen, and her light beams in struggling beams upon that strange group. Some of the poor fo-males, overcome by fatigue, hunger and grief, had fallen into a disturbed slumber.
But in the dim light I could perceive my brave little wife. Never till that moment did I know her courageous heart.
She knew we were near, and in this desperate moment, when every hand was needed for the work, she was not idle—She had stealthily drawn the knife of one of the sleeping warriors and had cut the thing that bound herself and her companions, and then frantically grasping the blade over the throat of a huge Indian seemed to await our approach. Approaching close upon the outer circle, I motioned to O'Neil to select a painted savage, whose loud breathing told that he slept soundly, and as he raised his arm to strike, I drove my knife into the heart of another. At the same instant I saw the arm of my little wife descend upon the throat of a third savage, and then upon the fourth, with the swiftness of lightning.
Now O'Neil and I sprang to our feet, and with our hatchets crushed in the skulls of three others, before the night savages could gather himself up. As this fellow attempted to rise with a yell, my comrade, who had leaped back to the cottonwood and snatched a rifle, sent a bullet through his brain, and then turned to make sure work of the dying savages upon the ground. Thus you see heaven was with us and guided our hands, for in far less time than I have taken to describe this bloody scene, we had rid the fair earth of these eight murderous fiends, and were received into the grateful embraces of our rescued friends. That was the happiest and proudest moment of my life.
We appropriated one of the canoes, and before the return of day, were all safely off and upon the descending current of the great river. That night found us under the sheltering roofs of kind and sympathizing friends.
A Munich letter of the 21st says:
"Yesterday Count von Lojning, a captain of cavalry in the Bavarian service, was married to the daughter of a brewer at Munich, named Frosman, by which marriage the daughter of a citizen of Munich becomes allied to the Royal Family of Bavaria."
A RE-CONSTRUCTION.—The Hamil-

LOUISVILLE, July 25.
A special despatch to the Courier, dated 23rd instant, says the rebels captured 63 cannon, 25,000 stand of arms, 1,250 horses, and all the stores and provisions of the Federal force, valued at $1,000, 000. The despatch also states that the juggery and capuletts marked Gen. Scott were also captured.
The rebel loss is stated at 2,500 killed, 1,000 wounded. The 4th Alabama regiment suffered severely, as did Wade's Hampden Legion.
Another despatch says the loss of the Confederates is 9,000 and the loss of the Federal forces 16,000, and that the num-is not known. Members of Congress are among the number.

It appears on investigation in official quarters, that the number of killed in the late battle is constantly being reduced until to-day, it amounted to only 150.
A large number of our troops which were taken prisoners were placed among the killed.
A private letter from Virginia which to-morrow, requesting the President to propose the exchange of Messrs. Barnett and Vallandigham for the Hon. Alfred Ely, who is a prisoner at Manassas; and may be voted down on the ground of the improbability that the rebels will give up one of our men in return for two whom they have already.

Intelligence has just been received here by the Government that a pretty large force of rebels had again been concentrated at Winchester and vicinity, under command of Generals Lee and Johnson, and considerable apprehension is entertained that an attack will be made on our forces at Harper's Ferry by the rebels.
What is a Zouave?
Doesticks says he is "a fellow with a red bag having sleeves to it for a coat; with two red bags without sleeves to them for trousers; with an embroidered and braided bag for a vest; with a cap like a red woollen saucer; with yellow boots like a fourth robber in a state play; with a moustache like two half-pound bushels; and with a sort of sword or gunsword for a weapon, that looks like the result of a love-affair between an amorous broad sword and lonely moustache, indelicate and tender—that is a Zouave. A fellow that can 'pull up' a hundred and ten pound dumb-bell; who can climb up an eighty foot rope, land over hand, with a barrel of flour hanging to his heels; who can do the 'giant swing' on a horizontal bar with fifty-six pounds tied to each ankle; who can walk up four long flights of stairs, holding a heavy man in each hand, at arm's length; who can climb a greased pole first, carrying a barrel of pork in his teeth—that is a Zouave. A fellow who can jump seventeen feet four inches high without spring board; who can tie his legs in double bow-knot round his neck without previously softening his shinbones in a steam bath; who can walk Blondin's tight rope with his stomach outside of nine brandy cocktails, and a stiff north-east gale outside of that; who can take a five-shooting revolver in each hand and knock the spools off ten diamants at eighty paces, turning summersaults all the time and firing in the air—that is a Zouave."

VERY CONSISTENT.—The Montreal Advertiser condemns the Hon. Malcolm Cameron for speaking to the electors of Kent from the Mustangs. The Advertiser has not a word of condemnation for the Hon. George Crawford, who did the same thing at the Brockville election, and who also addressed the electors of Toronto on the occasion of his son's election in that city, neither has he a word of condemnation for Chief Justice Robinson who also addressed the electors of Toronto on his son's election for Toronto. What is sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander. The Chief Justice, especially, ought to be severely reprimanded by our contemporary; but not a word.

Agricultural.
On the Growth of Red Clover.
Clover, with Timothy, will, in all probability, continue to constitute in Canada, the principal material for selling cattle or for the making of hay. These two grasses therefore are of the greatest importance in our system of agriculture, and whatever throws light on their improved culture, must be regarded with special interest by our farmers generally.
In the older countries of Europe it is a common complaint that clover is deteriorating, both as to quantity and quality; and such soils are said to be clover sick.
The only effectual remedy is to extend the rotation of cropping, or to bring clover round less frequently, say at intervals of five or six years, instead of three or four, and to apply artificial manures specially suited to the wants of the plant.
In this country we do not hear much complaint of this nature, still in some places of the older settled districts, the clover crop appears of late years to have been under former averages; and some change of culture is evidently required.
In most cases deeper ploughing, with longer intervals between the occurrence of the same crop, would unquestionably be found of great benefit. A deeper till would have the advantage of fixing the plant more firmly in the soil, and consequently making it less liable to be thrown out by spring frosts; the greatest injury, perhaps, to which the clover plant is subjected in this climate.
Dr. Voelcker, Chemist to the Royal Agricultural Society of England, made, a few years since, a number of very accurate and original experiments on the growth of Red Clover; and from the data of the results, published in the society's journal, we condense the following for the comparison of our readers.
"We are far from asserting" (remarks the Professor) "that there is evidence enough to show that the failure of clover, when grown too frequently on the same land, is altogether due to the want of a sufficient supply of certain organic compounds in the soil. At the same time we think that the facts of agricultural and horticultural practice, as well as the evidence of direct experiment, must lead to the conclusion, that the view that the organic compounds of the soil are only valuable to plants as a source of carbonic acid, requires modification. It is, indeed, probable, that some plants derive a considerable amount of their substance from carbon compounds other than carbonic acid, and that others depend for their carbon mainly, if not exclusively, upon carbonic acid."
Such crops as, in the course of cultivation, are subjected to pretty natural conditions of growth, and which accumulate the greater portion of their substance during the period at which the sun's rays are known to be most powerful in influencing the decomposition of carbonic acid by plants, appear to depend chiefly on that source of their carbon. Those, on the other hand, which are grown under somewhat abnormal conditions, and which store up a large amount of succulent products of a comparatively low degree of elaboration, are

BY JAMES J. HUNTER JR., M.D.

For different was the natal hour Of ancient European power, Where savage passion groped in night, Through thousand years of gloom, to flickering light;
While ignorance bore cruel sway,
And superstition led the way,
With faggots, torch, and canting rhime, To crush the human soul divine;
A thousand tyrant rights were claimed, A thousand cruel laws were framed—Conquest deemed all oppression right,— These ever urge to fiercer fight.

'E'en now the smoky atmosphere, Is gathering thick with vengeance drear; Civilization trembling stands, Mid brilliant steel and martial bands;
Two million men in arms appear, Fed, clothed, and paid throughout the year,
But to sustain a power effete, Gangrened rottenness of deceit: Would'st thou, young Giant, link thy name,
Thy spiritless worth, with Europe's shame?

I would not check thy buoyant flight—By dream of fell oppression's blight—The vista to thy future years Dispel the thought of sighs or tears, With pride I see thee dash dare to soar, In noble aim and classic lore—
In foremost rank assume to stand, Where genies, science wave their wand.

Thy primal schools, and normal more, Scatter the seeds of mental power, Models the youthful mind to train,
And free from superstition's bane, While higher foods tantalizing stand, Offered with a liberal hand.

Where'er I go, what'er I see,
From shore to shore, from sea to sea, Great public works attest thy growth, Thy innate energy and worth.

In arts, canals, and mineral wealth, In railroads, mines, commercial health, In boundless riches unexplored, In fertile plains and valleys broad,— In fisheries and forest wealth, In bracing air and blooming health—From Atlantic to Pacific's shore, No pen can half recount thy store.

With pent-up wealth earth's bosom hears, Inviting all men to receive,
Coal, copper, marble, iron, lead,
And zinc and gold, diffusely spread, O'er mountain, plain, and prairie now, Where flows the great Saskatchewan—Where still supreme, wild Indians reign, And pick their scanty food with pain—Where lovely flowers of gorgeous hue, And waving grass close up the view—Where the wild Buffalo peaceful feeds, And the Elkhorn securely breeds—Th' Assiniboine lavies rocky bed, And lake and rivulet are spread, O'er smiling plains and valleys fair, Inviting cultivation's care.

Then rouse thee to thy high behest—Thy destiny by God impress'd—To guide the bark and clear the way, And timely fix thy sovereign's sway, Before the brightest, purest gem,
In her national diadem, Be snatch'd by filibustering bands, And pass to hostile rival hands,— When dwarf'd thy dwindl'd thou shalt be Cover'd with shame and infamy.

Then rouse thee! calmly look around, Let no small views thy vision bound—Thy special maxim e'er should be Legislation for thy country;
This bright goal ever in thy view, Straight this noblest end pursue;
The statesman's eye should pierce time's veil,

To guide the Nation's future weal.
Let enterprise with caution join, Economy with skill combine—Then launch thy bark and onward spring Like a young eagle on the wing.

Thou need'st not stay to look behind, Nor e'er upbraid conscience fine; Man's highest hopes and interest join,
To prompt the heaven-born design.
Homes happy for thy spreading roar,
For oppress'd Europe's exiled ones—A counterpoise to barbarous flood, That Niagara weeps in blood,
And Kansas in the shrouds of night, Mourning her dead and ravaged right.
Canada! such shall be thy fate, If not repelled before too late!

O earnest reason! Truth's defence, Best curb of 'fatted insolence, Direct my muse and bid me rise To God's high throne above the skies—Above man's grovelling thoughts and fears His cruel, selfish, savage jeers;

To be continued in our next.

Amusement.

SUBSCRIBING FOR VOLUNTEERS.—An old maiden lady at Montrose declined to subscribe towards the organization of volunteer corps in that town, in the following terms:—"Indeed, I'll do one six thing I never could raise a man for myself; as I'm no gawn to raise men for King George."

'AUNT SOPHIE.—Poor Mrs. Wauchow when very ill, sent for Aunt Sophie, and said to her, "Sophie, I believe for I'm dying, and I always be kind to your children, when I have gone!"—"Na, na, tak yer spoilt deevils ye!" was the reply, "for I'll have naething to do wi' them."

'NOT EXPECTED IN THAT CASE.—A swaver of old Mrs. Robinson, (widow of an eminent professor of natural philosophy) to a gentleman whom she had invited to dinner, and accepted the invitation, if he spard "Weel, weel, if ye're dead I'll expect you."

'A SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHER, depicting the lack of attendants on his ministering, appealed to the present present.—"We can I do!" said he, "to get the boys girls here!" "I know," said one of the wretches, "What is it?" "Gire 'em a piece o' pie."

FRENCH PHAVERS.—During the French war, two old ladies in Strathmore were going to the Kirk, the one said to the other, "Was it not a wonderful thing the Breelish were ay victorious over French in battle?" "Not a bit," said the other old lady, "dona ye ken the Breelish ay say their prayers before ge' into battle." The other replied, "But canna French say their prayers as weel?" The reply was most characteristic, "Hool, berial bodies, mair could understan' that."

LOSING THE MINISTER.—A country minister had been invited, with his wife and one of his ladies, to the house of one of his lairds. Their host was proud of one of the large birds which just came into the fashion, and in the evening asked the lady how she had liked it. "O, very weel, sir; but, indeed, I thought I'd lost the minister a'tgether."

GOING TO SEE THE WORLD.—"Thy wife is quite inimitable!" I recollect my father giving a conversation between Perthshire laird and one of his tenants. The laird's eldest son was rather a simpleton. Said he, "I am going to see the world." The tenant said, "What for?" The laird replied, "I want to see the world." The tenant replied, "But gudeless, the world is a very bad place."

500 SHOT DEAD

DEAD SHOT WORM CURE

Is working Miracles beyond all conception.

The Medical Faculty of Scotland, as well as England and Ireland, have pronounced it to be one of the most good than all others.

It has stood the test since A.D. 1765, nearly one hundred years, which, almost every son and daughter of Scotland can testify. It has always borne the name of

"Old Dr. McKenzie's Worm Candy-Syrup."

As it resembles a candy-tick in taste and appearance, and a child eating it is wholly unconscious of taking medicine, and where it exists the result is beyond description.

A Child ten years of age, of Rev. J. McCall, Dundee, passed over 590 WORMS THREE DAYS after he testified, he had been cured by God's blessing, it saved the child's life. Thousands of similar testimonial given (without solicitation) to the present proprietor.

GENERAL SYMPTOMS of WORMS.

Restless, sudden starting and grinding teeth in sleep, constant, ravenous appetite (sometimes no appetite), paleness, picking nose, bowel complaints, fever, fretfulness, acidity, looseness of the flesh, dry cough, breath, &c. &c.

All the above symptoms will immediately cease to exist by using this Medicine twice. It always gives health, even worms exist. It is perfectly harmless, the most tender infant.

Warranted Purely Vegetable in Combination.

FULL DIRECTIONS WITH EACH PACKAGE.

Sold at retail by all Druggists and Medicine Dealers in Europe and America, at 7d. per box (15 boxes per package, or two shillings (50 cts) for five packages). The best of the package has the signature of H. E. McKENZIE M.D., Glasgow, on the wrapper.

YOUNG MEN.
There is an evil habit sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing with them into manhood, and which, if refrained by them in due time, not only cures every mental derangement, but gives rise to a series of powerful, lasting, and devastating affections. Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences, until they find the nervous system shattered, feel strange and uncomfortable feelings, and vague fears in the night, the spirit to turn upon themselves, and memories of health, for nothing else is seen catalogue of human diseases caused by this destructive drain upon the human system, having its thousands of victims through years of suffering down to an untimely grave. It destroys the nervous system, rapidly, wastes away the energies of the body, and causes every disease of the proper development of the system, directly for marriage, society, business, and earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, predisposed to consumption and a train of evils more dreaded than death itself.
